"Go Forth And Set The World Aflame!" Leahy Announces Summer Internship At ExxonMobil

ALUMNI STADIUM — This Jesuit motto of lighting shit on fire does not stop at inquisitions! Throughout Leahy's 29 years at Boston College, he has contributed to approximately 45 wildfires in the Amazon rainforest through his refusal to divest from fossil fuels. He is continuing his tireless effort of hastening global warming by interning at ExxonMobil this summer! Never say hard work cannot get you anywhere!

Leahy found out about this fiery opportunity through a Career Center email titled, "He wants to be more than just friends…" he immediately clicked open the email, thinking of his successor. The email actually said:

Happy Sunday Eagles!
Go Forth and Set the World Aflame! See the Stats - Where Our Grads Go!
Education, Nonprofit, and Social Impact Summer Internship Panel featuring ExxonMobil.

Leahy, initially disappointed by the misleading memo, began to really think about what it means to "Set the World Aflame." He thought he had done his best as president by tripling the number of times Stokes Lawn is torn up each semester, but he knew it was not enough.

Leahy's final straw with Boston College's liberal agenda was allowing Climate Justice to protest on a Friday afternoon for half an hour and switching to those damn Green2Go containers. Leahy knew he could do more to contribute to his legacy of setting the world on fire via CO2 emissions, but it wasn't going to be with these vegan Birkenstock-wearing Bostonites. Leahy asked his dear friend Claudius (Claude AI) how to "carbon footprint maxx" and found that the Mobil opportunity was for him! He "can't wait to see what the future holds," according to his LinkedIn.

"For the environment and our care of it, we pray to the Lord," said the reader at Baccalaureate Mass. Leahy stays silent while the crowd responds, "Lord, hear our prayer," and instead mutters to himself, "Let it die," humming the tune of Aloysius O'Hare from The Lorax.

Leahy beckons, "Go Forth and Set the World Aflame!" to the graduates of the Morrissey College of Arts and Sciences. He chuckles to himself, knowing that his next stop will be boarding an oil rig for Mobil's orientation.

Theology Major Thrilled That Trump-Pope Conflict Makes Their Degree Relevant

THEOLOGY DEPARTMENT — With tensions between the U.S. and the Vatican at an all-time high, American theologians, politicians, and Elon Musk's bots on X have been in hot debate over the extent to which the Pope should comment on American policy.

Recently, Pope Leo XIV has become a sharp critic of the Trump administration's policy. The Pope has criticized Trump's policy of permitting divorce, his unwillingness to put tariffs on truly harmful goods (like condoms and occult books, such as Harry Potter), and, to a lesser extent, Trump's war in Iran.

Long unresolved theological questions have been brought to the forefront amidst this criticism, including "Is drone warfare in the Bible?" and "Can JD Vance ethically kill two popes in two years?" Due to this turmoil, Boston College theology students finally have their second opportunity to use what they've learned. So far, they've only used their knowledge of how to pray for a miracle (a job offer email).

"The Pope clearly hasn't read the Bible," said theology major Theodore Logy (MCAS '27). "I know that only he who is without sin may cast the first stone, but clearly there is an exception if another man is only weeks away from developing boulder-casting capabilities."

Theology majors have long been subjected to a rigorous academic program. Students have to count over 100 rosary beads a night. Further, theology majors are only allowed to receive the summa cum laude honor posthumously, and that is only if they are canonized as a saint.

"LYING Pope Leo needs to stay in line," said President Donald J. Trump (CSOM '68). "Last I checked, even heaven has pearly gates to keep out illegal, demonic immigrants. If Jesus had just listened to the law and order policies of Pontius Pilate, I wouldn't have to even deal with this fraud!"

At press time, Logy was seen trying to complete his homework (curing a leper by 11:59 PM).

HACKY SACK'ED! The Truth Behind Boston College's Biggest Losses of the Year

MALONEY LAWN — This year on the Heights, many notable faces have failed us, left us, or simply never shown up! Father Leahy, Shawna Cooper Whitehead, Two Friends, Cynthia Erivo, Mac Salads, Earl Grant, Dylan Lonergan, and the Walsh Elevator, to name just a few.

Why did they leave? Where did they go? Who even is Two Friends? Questions like these have dominated campus conversations throughout the academic year. Diligent onlookers from our staff at the Classic have determined the cause.

The signs were subtle – new additions to the Boston College Club Hacky Sack GroupMe and verified followers on Instagram accounts like @ultimate.sack and @bc.sack. Quickly, the pattern became clear; each of these beloved on-campus names had been sacked. Hacky Sack'ed.

Rather than quitting, being "let go," stuck on a plane, stuck off a plane, or entering the transfer portal, these individuals chose to pursue a simpler life – one not defined by LinkedIn titles or ACC standings, but by the soft thwack of a Hacky Sack ricocheting off a pair of scuffed-up Golden Gooses.

University officials have denied any connection between administrative turnover and the rise in Hacky Sack'ing, though President William P. Leahy, S.J., has not been reachable for comment, reportedly "in the middle of THE circle" and "absolutely cooking."

Early metrics suggest Earl Grant has already posted better numbers in Hacky Sack than his entire tenure on the Heights, most recently recording a career-high 17 touches – more offense than Eagles fans have seen in years.

ACHING FOR: A whirlwind Fizz romance

GENERATING: Claude senior thesis

DIVING INTO: A "sad bug summer"

WANTING: The house tour

I KNOW: Dada

YEARNING FOR: Newton Woods camping trip

SEEKING: Authentic human connection

LOOKING FOR: A friend with a Cape house

WOULD GET PUNCHED TO OBTAIN: Saltiest dill pickle

PUTTING: All my eggs in one basket

LUSTING AFTER: Sopping wet Mac salad

horoscopes

Aries: You're running out of time to become an influencer, and if you don't start now, you will never succeed.

Taurus: You should adopt an exotic animal. Preferably something reptilian. But nothing you could purchase at a PetCo. Or a PetSmart. Only something far more sinister.

Gemini: You must learn to play a wind instrument, or something terrible will happen. We recommend the flute. Or the oboe.

Cancer: Take the discussion board reply personally. Looking them up in the directory and finding their dorm via Instagram is the BARE MINIMUM!

Leo: Be wary of collecting hobbies, for that Hacky Sack is haunted. Your feet have deceived you in the past, and they will deceive you again.

Virgo: You have contracted a rare form of the equine flu. Give it to your bitch ass TA who gave you a B on your discussion post.

Libra: Very soon, it will become dangerous if your major is still undecided. Fix that.

Scorpio: You will run a marathon. You will shit your pants during it, but it will impress the really sexy runner behind you.

Sagittarius: You will soon be seduced by a deceptively young man. Let it happen! Unless he is below 5'7…then run.

Capricorn: Make necessary preparations, as your Google Calendar will likely crash soon. Time to pick up a copy of the Farmer's Almanac.

Aquarius: I'm behind you. Don't look.

Pisces: Go on TikTok, search "Dracotok shifting," and let the rest do the work. Make sure you write your script with the proper (sexual) intentions.

Jenny's Jellicle Journal

I'm back! Some guy named Dave (6'4) filled in for me last time, so I killed him.

Q: Jenny, I CANNOT figure out how to do a titration; my solution is always bright pink. I need advice!

A: Baby mixologist: 2 oz tequila, 1 oz fresh lime juice, 1 oz triple sec, shake and serve over ice with a salt rim.

Q: Dear Jenny, every time I come back to my dorm, my blankets and pillows are all over the floor. I think my roommate might be sleeping in my bed, but she won't admit it. What should I do?

A: Purchase bananas and put them under your blankets. If your roommate is covered in bananas next time you see her, it's probably her. If the bananas disappear, it could be a troop of monkeys jumping on your bed, in which case, contact your local zoo.

Q: My roommate is full of hatred, and her hate for others is infiltrating my happy-go-lucky daily routine. Any advice for a vindictive wench?

A: As I always say, never beat around a dead bush.

Q: Last semester, I listened to Dave's advice, and I accidentally created an army of competitively woke slinks who won't let me hit. Help.

A: First of all, never listen to Dave. Also, the woke spectrum is a circle, and if you out-woke her, you can probably convince her that a mediocre hookup would be liberating and quietly feminist.

IF YOU CHOSE MOSTLY A'S YOU ARE … ChatGPT: Old reliable. You have been there for us since we thought AI was just going to do our homework for us and not take our jobs postgrad, and we love you for it. Don't feel bad while everyone is trying other AI platforms, they know where home is! Love you <3.

IF YOU CHOSE MOSTLY B'S YOU ARE… Siri: You like to take commands, not be in command ;) You are a silly little submissive. Everyone is always so focused on their AI boyfriend that they forgot about SIRI, who has been in their back pocket since the iPhone 4S was released in 2011. Now go sit in the corner until you are called on.

IF YOU CHOSE MOSTLY C'S YOU ARE… Claude: You probably played lacrosse in high school, spent all of your summers on Nantucket, and have your 2027 IB Internship at Goldman waiting for you. FERDA, that's what you are.

IF YOU CHOSE MOSTLY D'S YOU ARE… Gemini: I honestly hope you get flagged for AI-use on your next exam… Who actually uses this? If this is you, maybe you should change.
