

Baby Boomer Professor is adamant YOU can't touch the projector controls, but SHE can.
see Sports

See her sitting next to you?! Take the initiative man! Chicks dig that!
see Major League 2

Study reveals those who comment on old Facebook posts don't go to Heaven.
see Genesis 27:27

THE NEW ENGLAND CLASSIC

DECEMBER 11, 2014

Serving Students with Chips and a Pickle Since 2007

VOLUME 8, ISSUE 3

ResLife allowing "Temporary" Dorms in Libraries During Finals

Have you or a friend ever said, "Man, I have so much studying to do that I am going to live in the library until finals are over!"? Well, Boston College ResLife is catering to students' hyperbolic demands in a daring experiment: Bapst and O'Neill will be opened as official dormitories from December 11th to December 21st. These dorms will be temporary, but then again, so were The Mods!

"Of course, this wouldn't be an authentic BC ResLife experience without pick times!" said Seth McNofun, head of ResLife. "Students will be given priority according to class year, but in reverse order, as usual, since we know seniors don't give enough of a shit to want to live in the library. Freshmen will be given the first library dorm pick times."

McNofun anticipates that the Bapst grad-student mezzanine will be claimed first, shortly followed by O'Neill study rooms. The top floor of Bapst will be divided into several eight-mans. "The study rooms in O'Neill are ideal for forming singles," says the head of BC ResLife.

This arrangement wouldn't be an authentic BC ResLife experience without intermittent, surprise room checks! Because this is a private university that owns your soul, RAs and RDs can come into your rooms whenever they want! If you have a foam mattress pad, they'll assume that you're planning to set the library on fire, and you will be prosecuted for attempted arson.

"YEAH I KNOW IT WASN'T IN THE ROOMMATE SURVEY, BUT I LIKE TO STUDY IN BED."

Instead of traditional write-ups, students facing disciplinary action will be forced to study for their most important final next to someone who mouth-breathes, is eating chips, and is listening to aggressive EDM music without headphones. If problems continue, the student will go on Library Probation and be deprived of his/her supply of Adderall. For the third and final level of discipline, students on Super Library Probation will have to do all of their studying with actual books; no laptops.

The response to the temporary dorms concept has been overwhelmingly positive. Several Roncalli Sophomores have been heard shouting that they're going to "turn up in Bapst," bring their GameCube to play Super Smash Bros Melee, and hang up their "super sick" Pink Floyd and Pulp Fiction posters all over the place.

24 Conversation Starters for the Attractive Human Being Next to You

It's finals week, which means sexual tension in the library is at an all-time high. You're probably seated next to a cutie right now who is busily working on something important. So what better time to make a move? Oh, you don't think you look good because you're in your pajamas and you haven't slept or showered in a week because of the stress? Think again, you got this. Be confident. Here are some great lines to help you spark romance with that special stranger and melt the during the cold, dead grip of finals.

1. Hey I don't normally do this, but my name is Mike, would you like to get coffee together sometime?
2. Hey I don't normally do this, but my name is Michelle, would you like to get an iced latte together sometime?
3. Hook-up culture isn't satisfying my emotional needs, and I'd like to settle down for the rest of the year. Would you settle with me?
4. Want to do disgusting things on Saturday night, and then go to Mass Sunday morning?
5. I'd wait in the Press It line at Eagle's Nest for 3 hours to press my face against yours.
6. Studying? More like stu-DYING AM I RIGHT?! HAHAHA-HAHAHA
7. When do you go home? How many people have asked you that already?

8. Her look at this BuzzFeed article: "17 Reasons We Should Totally Date"
9. Oh you hate BuzzFeed, too? In that case...(see #10)
10. Get down on one knee and propose on the spot (DO IT, YOU WON'T!)
11. Do you feel that gum under the table?
12. You smell just like my mom, before she died.
13. Oh you're a hockey player? Where do you normally store your stick?
14. I'd drink coffee from the vending machine in Bapst if it meant I got to be with you for the rest of my life. Just kidding, fuck that coffee.
15. Do the curtains match your pubes?
16. Wanna go do some hand stuff in the stacks?
17. Oh you're on the hockey team? I'll give you a plug for your laptop charger.
18. That orgo looks hard, which reminds me ...
19. Hey girl are you my dad? you don't seem to notice I exist.
20. Your bulge in those sweats is making me sweat.
21. I bet you give great back rubs, like my stepbrother.
22. They call me Jerri Pork, did you know that?
23. What's the white backpack for? Club Tennis? Oh, never mind.
24. Check out this awesome "newspaper."

CAMPUS HAPPENINGS

BC to Harness Ceiling Tile Rage To Destroy Edmonds

A recent surge in the Boston College pastime of breaking Walsh Hall ceiling tiles has forced University officials to finally address the crisis with a tangible response. Last week, a panel of University officials, sociology professors, and Resident Directors met to discuss various solutions to the destruction of the residence hall's ceilings.

While several, sensible proposals were put forth, ranging from installing surveillance cameras in the hallways to handing out heavy fines for caught transgressors, the panel was most intrigued by an idea put forth by Professor Bill O'Donovan, a twenty-year veteran of the Sociology Department and proud BC Alum. The idea? Get students to destroy Edmonds Hall instead.

Edmonds Hall, now in its forty-fifth year of existence, is slated to be knocked down next year to make way for a new Plex. The cost of demolishing it will be approximately $500,000, a sum that the University, short on cash with a meager $2 billion dollar endowment, is hoping to avoid.

"Getting students to do the work for us will not only give them an outlet through which to express their Friday night, drunken frustration at not getting laid, but it will also help us save a ton of cash," said O'Donovan. "There's no way we can stop destruction from occurring on a weekend basis. Sociology studies have shown that college guys are easily enraged

"YOU GUYS NEVER SAID ANYTHING ABOUT CONTROLLED DEMOLITION!"

by lack of sex, which seems to be the case for the majority of BC students punching out ceiling tiles."

The university also announced plans to make a "Nights on The Heights" event out of the demolition, where students will be able to pick up free power tools and give it their best shot at razing Edmonds floor-by-floor. Although pizza and soda will be served at the event, there will be no alcohol. Ray Maroney, director of "Nights on The Heights" events, does not see this as a problem.

"We encourage all students planning on attending to pregame the event," said Maloney as he took a swig of his Dr. Pepper 10. "We want to create a setting in which they feel most comfortable knocking shit down. In the past, 'Nights on the Heights' have been notorious because students feel they can't be themselves, but this time, that'll all change."

Residents of Edmonds Hall, for the most part Juniors and Seniors, will be resettled in forced five-mans on Newton Campus. While some of these inhabitants are sad to see their wretched home disappear earlier than expected, others are glad for the change of pace.

"Wait, no, we're pissed about this! Why the hell are you writing that? I'd rather be homeless than live on that piece of shit they call a campus!" remarked Julie McCoy A&S, '16.

Fourth Year Experience Launched for Struggling Seniors

While the original FYE (First Year Experience) is designed to help struggling freshman find their way at Boston College, administrators have decided to launch another FYE, a program aimed to help struggling seniors. This newly designed Fourth Year Experience will be fully up and running by January, 2015 says Fitz Out, the new director.

"This is just in time to combat senioritis," she noted, "I really think it's a necessary service for those unlucky few who will be leaving campus in the Spring."

The office will immediately begin offering a retreat for seniors only called 28 Hours. Allowing seniors to return for evenings in the Mods, the retreat will shuttle students back and forth from the Connors Retreat Center during the evenings. In order to stay true to the BC bus system, the bus will make its last run at 2am. Similar to 48 hours, 28 hours will reflect on experiences at BC, however instead of senior speeches, there will only be the fishbowl. Confession will also be available each morning.

ACCORDING TO THE FOREMOST EXPERTS, THE STRUGGLE IS LIKE GLOBAL WARMING: NOT REAL

Additionally, FYE will run small focus groups for seniors, including ones for those who majored in English and now cannot find a job, and also for those who have sold their soul to Finance. Father Hayes will even be running a seminar on how to remain in the Jesuit tradition after BC, while the Corcoran family has offered to teach one on the importance of donating. A weekly seminar series called "HOW" will also start up in January. Seminar topics include "How to Tell Your Roommates You Got a Job Without Making Them Feel Bad," "How to Tell Your Parents You're Unemployable," "How to Cope With Post-College Alcoholism," and "How Long You Have to Wait to Un-Friend Acquaintances on Facebook."

Rumor has it that Capstone will also be housed here as well, but with the sudden shift in policies, BC will be offering even fewer than normal.

"Sucks to suck, Seniors!" said an anonymous Freshman.

WANTED

CAN YOU KICK
A BALL THROUGH THESE POSTS?

GET PAID $63K A YEAR TO KICK A BALL

JOIN THE FOOTBALL TEAM

God Pass App Released

Hear ye, hear ye! Lovers of Christ, rejoice! For our holy God and savior Jesus Christ has thus worked his magic through the hand of Jesuits who are also good at developing iPhone applications! The God Pass App is now live!

Praise The Lord, for He is good! All of us sinners may now “check-in” to mass and confession with the GPS technology located on our smartphones! Oh, brothers and sisters! Such great news is this that God loved us so much that he gave us this opportunity to record our holy devotion with a points system just like the Gold Pass app Boston College Athletics uses! But let us take a moment to praise our one, almighty God for not making the God Pass application as shitty as the Gold Pass application. Our Lord and His “bros,” the Jesuits, are too marvelous and too strong to make such a horrid, glitchy application! Praise Him! Praise them! Through Him all things are possible, including software development!

Oh, gather round and listen to The Word, all you Fishers of Men! Give thanks that all of us who are one in God’s creation may now compete for free swag, which those of us mortals with enough God Pass points shall receive! Praise be unto the omnipotent God who gave his Chosen People this opportunity to obtain such dankass free stuff with our points! Hark!

Oh Lord, please bless us with your loving forgiveness just as you forgive the damned if we show up halfway through Mass and too drunk off red wine and thusly forget to sign in to your holy Church on the God Pass app!

Furthermore, oh beloved God, please forgive our transgressions if us sinners merely stand outside Church and check in anyways, for we had your best intentions at heart, we’re just so goddamn - ...sorry... - busy all the time, you know?

Locally Grown Adderall Available at Addie’s for Finals

Addie’s, a stalwart for Boston College’s lovers of locally grown produce, is unveiling a new special for finals week: Adderall. Wikipedia, the center of all knowledge in the known universe, describes Adderall as a psychostimulant drug of the phenethylamine class used in the treatment of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder and narcolepsy.

So why is it being sold at Addie’s?

“Two reasons,” says Addie’s manager Lee F. Y. Green. “The first is seasonal demand! We know you college students love that extra attentional boost during finals week as much as you love our local produce, so we figured we’d temporarily provide Adderall as a salad topping! We’re even infusing our veggie burgers with Adderall. We think Adderall’s active ingredients of dextroamphetamine and levoamphetamine will add a nice, wholesome, and organic touch to our already healthy options. And then the second reason we’re providing Adderall is for the puns. Are you kidding me? Addie’s? Adderall? Get it? Guys? Right? You get it, right?”

Green paused to laugh.

“Oh, man. That gets me every time,” Green concluded, wiping a tear from his eye. Although concerns have been raised from University Health officials about the side-effects from the drug, which can be extremely dangerous when abused, Green scoffed it off.

“What would you rather have? A bunch of kids who can’t sleep because of a teeny bit of Adderall, or ones who can’t sleep because they’re doing so shitty on their finals? You tell me!”

Selfish Sophomore Doesn’t Do Secret Santa

You better watch out, you better not cry, you better not pout, we’re telling you why. You should’ve stopped being such a grouch and done your room’s Secret Santa routine that you do every year even though you just started this year. What is better than spending your nonexistent funds on a present that you literally picked out for its hilarity and give it to a roommate who will probably laugh when they see it and then never pick it up again? NOTHING. That is what is better.

Unfortunately for one Sophomore, Katie Stevenson, she realized far too late how much she wanted to participate in this great ritual, and missed out on the wonderful holiday bonding experience as a result.

“All my friends got the cutest little things,” cried out Stevenson between sobs of anguish, swigs of Fireball, and scoops of Half-Baked Ben and Jerry’s ice cream, “and now all I am getting is the cold shoulder!”

Gifts exchanged included a miniature bottle of Rubinoff, a T-shirt with the saying “I’m the girlfriend of the man from Nantucket,” and a pair of Lululemon leggings stolen from the laundry room. Jubilation seemed to be felt all around, and the girls proceeded to celebrate by trying to sneak into four, (count ‘em) Mod parties unsuccessfully, and then coming back to watch Frozen.

Rumor has it that Stevenson’s refusal to participate in Secret Santa is causing massive upheaval, as the other girls in the 8-man are contemplating kicking her out of their off-campus plans as well as “never returning her curling iron.”

“I think they’re gonna let ME go from the 8-man!” remarked Stevenson.

4 NIGHTLIFE? WHAT NIGHTLIFE?

Newton Bus Driver Goes Rogue, Takes Freshmen to Strip Club

A Boston College bus driver is under fire this week for allegedly using his bus to transport a group of male freshman students to a strip club during one of his shifts. Officials say that Matthew P. Wildone, a fifteen-year BC employee and driver for the university's Newton route, picked up a group of ten male freshman students in front of the College Road bus stop three Thursday nights ago, and upon seeing their sad, dejected faces, he decided to take the group out for a joy-ride.

"THEY SEE ME ROLLIN, BUT TRUST ME, THEY AIN'T HATIN!"

"I had just finished an earlier trip where I drove a flock of freshman girls to Lower Campus, all of whom were wearing their tightest dresses and highest heels," said Wildone, "when suddenly I see a group of these downtrodden, lowest-of-the-Earth freshman guys getting on the bus after a long night at Bapst. As a fond believer in the Jesuit emphasis on charity and kindness, I decided to take these boys out and show them the time of their lives".

Instead of turning left on Commonwealth Avenue as he usually did, Wildone turned right and sped down towards Boston, first stopping at a nearby liquor store to buy two thirty-racks of Keystone Light for the bus. The students, though surprised, were also quite pleased.

"We were so scared when he first decided to turn right on Comm. Ave," said freshman Darryl C. Prude, who was on the bus that night. "But then he was all like 'Calm down, we're going to a strip club boys', and we were all like 'Okay!'"

After driving around Boston for two hours while the students pre-gamed in the back of the bus, Wildone finally stopped at an Allston strip club, where he paid for a round of lap dances for all ten students.

"These Newton guys got screwed over by the system, so they really deserved the good time," said Wildone, who has since been relegated to driving the Brighton Shuttle. "A couple of them did piss their pants during their lap dances but, besides that, it was a solid boy's night out full of laughs, brews, and broads."

Study Reveals Leading Causes of the Freshman 150

Every fall semester, the incoming freshmen dip their dainty little toes into the waters of Boston College, welcoming the newfound freedom and euphoria that comes with living away from home for the first time. But this freedom can be dangerous. Without nutritious guidance from mom and dad, many freshmen find themselves indulging in food like never before, and expanding like never before! Yes, The Freshman 150, formerly known as The Freshman 15, is alive and well among Boston College students. A recent survey shows that nearly 1 in 4 freshmen gain at least 75% of their body weight, an average of about 150 pounds, during their first semester at Boston College. We undertook research to find out why this massive weight gain occurs every year without fail.

Stress. It's no secret that that the courses at Boston College are rigorous, which can cause a lot of tension in the lives of freshmen. 60% of freshmen say their weight gain is directly related to stress-eating cinnamon buns while hunched over their Portico homework, crying alone as "Karma Police" by Radiohead plays.

Booze! Drinking plays an important part in every college student's life, and being away from parents means new freshmen can get a little carried away. This can quickly turn into 150-pound weight gain if you aren't careful. Instead of chugging costly, calorie-rich, and tasty drinks, stick to delicious Bud Light®.

IS THAT A FORCE CHOKE OR DID I DEVELOP EXTRA CHINS?

Late night snacking. The nocturnal culture at college can be great for sinking your teeth into a good book, or chomping down on that lab report due tomorrow, but it also means more opportunities to eat. Many a freshman have fallen victim to the calls of mozzarella sticks at Late Night. If you listen closely you can hear them right now. "Eat me!" they scream! Six out of nine freshmen (HA!) admit to being shameless gluttons after midnight.

Peer pressure. Being around hundreds of your best friends all the time can be tough on your self-esteem. When everyone else is gaining 150 pounds, it can be tempting to want to fit in. When your friends are chanting your name as you gobble down mini wieners like a human garbage disposal, take a step back and ask yourself, is this who I want to be? Polls say the answer is yes, but just to the point where you won't break the bunk bed in your forced triple.

Do you enjoy wearing a hoodie sweatshirt AND a hoodie Northface?

We're always looking for more writers, members of the British Royal Family, photographers, charity wristbands, watchmakers, sit down comedians, and stand up comedians.

See us on our website www.thenecpaper.com, on Twitter @theneclassic, on Facebook at facebook.com/thenewenglandclassic, and on Google+, Pinterest, MySpace, Tumblr, Yelp, Tinder, and the El Pelon App. E-mail: thenewenglandclassic@gmail.com

Please recycle me! © 2014